Yesterday arived a Mail from France

From the Paris Gazette, dated Feb. 17.
Madrid, January 29.

THE Health of the Queen continues ſtill broken by Returns of the Fever: The Phyſicians have made her leave off Woman's Milk, which they had directed her to take, and have begun to give her the Bark. Horſes are placed at divers Stages on the Road for meeting the Phyſician who is ſent for from Paris, and bringing him with the greater Expedition hither: And a Phyſician is ſent for from Saragoſſa, who cured her of her former Indiſpoſition; as is alſo another from Turin. The 25th the King was out a Sporting, and ſhot three Buſtards. Then he cauſed a Wild Boar which had been driven into the Toils to be let looſe; the Boar made directly at his Majeſty, and was not ſtopped by his firing at him: Don Alonſo Manrique fired at him likewiſe, but miſſed him; and ſeeing he continued running on at his Majeſty, he threw himſelf juſt in the Way of the Beaſt, who with a ſtroke of his Tusks tore his Boot and Coat, but did not wound him. Mean while the Guards ran in, and killed the Beaſt with Piſtol-ſhot. The King has conferred the Employment of Major of Saragoſſa on Don Guillen de Guſman, Lieutenant-Collonel, who loſt his Right Arm in the Attack of Campo-Mayor. The 27th the Marquis de Thouy, Lieutenant-General, ſet out from hence with the Marquis de Flavacourt, Major-General, to command a Body which is forming in the Neighbourhood of Lerida, of the Troops which are in Arragon and at Tortoſa. Don Joſeph de Armendariz and Don Diego de Alarcon, Lieutenant-Generals, and the Marquis de San Vicente Major-General, are to repair thither likewiſe from the Camp before Barcelona. A Courier arrived from Catalonia has brought Advice, that the Fleet which was at Alicant, arrived the 19th in the Port of Terragona, having been augmented by the Veſſels which were in readineſs in divers Parts on the Coaſt, to the Number of 20 Ships and 50 Barks. The ſaid Fleet had on Board a great Number of Artillery, with Stores of Ammunition and Proviſions, Part of which was landed at Terragona, and the 22d they ſailed for Barcelona, which is forthwith to be beſieged. We have likewiſe an Account, that ſome Places had revolted anew in Catalonia; but that ſeveral Detachments having been ſent againſt them, had burnt ſix of thoſe Places, and put to the Sword the Rebels who were in them, which had made all quiet again in that Country.

From San Felion de Pallarols, Jan. 25. The Revolt of ſome Places in the midſt of Catalonia, had not the Effects which we were at firſt put into Apprehenſion of. The Count de Mortemar ſent by the Duke de Popoli with a Detachment towards the Plain of Vich, in his March beat the Rebels from ſeveral Poſts of which they were poſſeſſed, burnt all Caldés de Monbuy to the Ground, and part of Sernanat. He then advanced to the Plain of Vich, and the Approach of the Count de Fiennes with ſome Troops having drawn the Rebels towards the Col de Cabrera to diſpute that Paſſage with him, the Count de Montemar paſſed that of Saint Golgat without Reſiſtance. He beat all the Rebels from about Vich, where they had very much ſtreightened Don Feliciano de Bracamonte. He followed them with all poſſible Diligence, and attacked them in an Advantagious Poſt called Nueſtra Semora de la Gleba, where they were forced, two hundred being killed and 400 made Priſoners. This done, he drove a Body of the Revolters from the Mountain of St. Hippolito, cauſing the Village and neighbourhood to be plundered and burnt. In the mean while the Count de Fiennes had ſent a conſiderable Detachment to Eſquerol to diſperſe the Rebels who were there, but they fled before the Troops could get up with them. Thus the Revolt on the Side of the Plain of Vich appears to be quelled, except ſome Villages of Mount Senis which are ſtill in Arms. The Count de Montemar is on the March towards the Luſſanés, to joyn Don Joſeph Vallejo, all the Rebels having retired towards Solſona and Manreſa. Don Joſeph Vallejo had diſtributed his Troops into divers Parts, the more to ſtreighten the Garriſon of Cardona: But the Rebels having ſuddenly drawn together in great Number, had ſurrounded them in their Quarters, ſo that they were not able to joyn each other, and even Don Joſeph Vallejo having aſſembled a pretty conſiderable Body, could not penetrate thither, the Paſſages being defended againſt him by a greater Number of the Rebels: But 'tis probable the Approach of the Count de Montemar will diſperſe them. Beſides, Don Diego Gonſales being ſent from the Camp with another Detachment, advanced towards Igualada, where the Regiment of Horſe of Brabant was beſieged. He burnt in his Way the Village of Saint Quintin, and marched towards la Puebla, whither the Rebels had retired and fortified themſelves: However, he forced them, and having cauſed all he found there to be put to the Sword, he ordered the Village to be burnt. Then he returned Martorel, where he waited for Cannon and Ammunition to attack three Caſtles near that Place which are ſtrong by their Situation.
